

MEMO TO FCC
October 29, 2004

Dear Sirs:

I am writing to ask that you not replace the current FM translator service in the San Antonio, Texas, area with the Low Power FM service. I am concerned that one of my favorite stations, K-LOVE, which I hear on 91.3, will not be able to stay on the air with LPFM service.

K-LOVE serves my community by providing family programming without advertisements, just community announcements that promote a positive community environment. It encourages persons of all ages by the music as well as the tone of the community information shared between music. What a great source of positive influence for today's children and teens in particular in an era of war and fear of threats on our nation.

K-LOVE is in the public interest by its positive promotion of family and life in general. With the myriad of other less desirable and family-friendly stations available, surely this one positive voice deserves an opportunity to reach a public desperate to hear positive things in these days of uncertainty.

Please consider keeping the current translator service so I can continue to listen to K-LOVE.

Thank you for your consideration.

Christi Hardin
